Dear Ray:

I have just learned that you have been hospitalized and we certainly hope that it is not too serious. Someone called my wife and called it to our attention. I have been trying to call your house here but suppose the family is with you or some of the folks.

I hope that this letter will be too late to catch you. That would mean you were already on your way home. But it staying there means they can correct your condition it will be best for you.

This letter is written to let you know we are concerned about your welfare. You have my best personal wishes for a speedy and complete recovery. I have come to think a great deal of you and want to have the privilege of being with you more.

I am enclosing some reading material you might be interested in reading.

Sincerely yours,

John Allen Chalk
